DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: on page 6 of the specification, the term "lien" is used twice in paragraph 19, and is assumed to be a misspelling.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Erdmann (US 6,321,958). Erdmann discloses the same invention including a storage compartment 12 with a top 12T, bottom 12B, opposing sides 12S, and an opening in the vicinity of 12T, as well as a storage sleeve of material 14 intended for holding any cylindrical object such as a lipstick (29, see also column 1 lines 54-56). Though Erdmann's functional language does not disclose supporting her invention under a garment by the cylindrical device, her device is structurally analogous to the enumerated claims and is intended for the similar use of containing several small personal articles discreetly. The initial statement of intended use and all other functional implications have been carefully considered but are deemed not to impose any patentably distinguishing structure over that disclosed by Erdmann which is capable of being used in the intended manner, i.e., suspended by the cylindrical object under the clothing (see M.P.E.P. 2111). This reasoning applies to both claim 1 and claim 9.

With regard to claims 2 and 10, the storage sleeve for cylindrical objects is elastic (column 3 line 6).

With regard to claims 3, 4, and 13, the support may be cylindrical (column 3 line 2) and especially may be a lipstick container (column 3 line 1).

With regard to claims 6 and 15, Erdmann's assembly has a flap 16 covering the pocket opening.

With regard to claims 7 and 16, the pocket is formed by a single piece of material sewn at opposing sides (column 2 lines 45-48).

With regard to claims 11 and 12, the applicant's use of the terms "above" and "top" cannot define the instant device specifically enough to overcome the structural similarities of Erdmann. If Figure 1 in the Erdmann patent were turned upside down, it would clearly read on both claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

Art Unit: 3727

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

6. Claims 5 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Erdmann (US 6,321,958) in view of Pollak (US 2474495). Erdmann discloses the storage compartment 12, but does not mention a zipper closure for the compartment. Pollak teaches the use of a zipper to selectively close compartments in a personal item storage device in Figure 2 of his disclosure. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of application to include a zipper feature in a fabric compartment meant to store small, important items.

7. Claims 8 and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Erdmann (US 6,321,958) in view of O'Mara (US 4,736,853). While Erdmann provides an elastic loop connected to the pocket structure (Figure 3), it does not specify how that loop is connected. O'Mara teaches the sewing (column 2, line 41) of elastic loop supports 28, 30, and 32 to storage compartments for securely retaining cylindrical objects (column 2, line 66-68). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to use sewing as a method of connecting elastic to fabric.

8. Claims 11 and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Erdmann (US 6,321,958) in view of Freer (US 6,202,911). Erdmann discloses a storage compartment support member 14 and a pocket construction 12, but in Figure 1 the storage compartment is shown as oriented below the pocket. Freer's holder for small articles teaches a horizontal loop for containing cylindrical items positioned above a pocket framework. The scorecard pencil intended for stowage in the horizontal loop is capable of supporting the golf accessory organizer in a pendant manner. While Freer's device is meant to hold a scorecard pencil in the cylindrical object holder and golf balls in the pocket, the devices can be compared based on their similar uses for securing small articles to a person's clothing. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to place the support member above or on top of the pocket in order to hold articles in specific orientations.

Conclusion

9. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Harris et. al. (US D485,677) shows a related invention.
